

Editorial Guidelines for Guest Contributors

If you're interested in contributing to Marlene On The Move as a guest author, please read the following guidelines carefully. These ensure that every article maintains the quality and coherence that my readers expect.

Tone and Style

- Write in a personal, engaging, and informative tone
- Avoid technical jargon or overly promotional language
- Share stories or tips based on real experiences, not AI-generated or generic content

Article Structure

- Begin with a clear and captivating introduction
- Use subheadings to organize content
- Write short, digestible paragraphs
- Include practical tips or reflections to enrich the piece
- Minimum 800 words
- Visuals are welcome to support the narrative

SEO and Links

- SEO-ready articles are welcome, as long as they maintain quality, clarity, and provide real value to the reader
- You may include one external link (non-commercial, relevant, and contextually appropriate)
- Affiliate or sponsored links are not allowed – Marlene On The Move reserves the right to insert its own affiliate links if relevant
- All outbound links must be naturally integrated within the content and not used solely for SEO or promotional purposes

Images

- Submit original photos or use free-license images with proper attribution
- Minimum width: 1800px
- Images must be relevant to the article and of good quality

Editorial Process

- Submissions are subject to review and editing for clarity, tone, and grammar
- Articles may be adapted to better fit the blog's format and voice
- Publication is not guaranteed until confirmed and scheduled
- Once published, the content becomes part of Marlene On The Move and should not be reposted elsewhere

If these guidelines resonate with your writing and you're ready to contribute something valuable to the travel community, please submit your idea via the submission form.